Army's Crack 82d Airborne Seen Top Prospect For NATO Duty In New Plan

The Army's Vice Chief of Staff has given first official word from the Pentagon that the Army hopes soon to start division rotation.

And immediately, it appeared likely that the 82d Airborne Division or its sister unit, the 11th Airborne Division, would be tapped to start the program.

The 82d at Ft. Bragg, N. C., long a "combat-ready" outfit, is seen the more likely choice, although the 11th at Ft. Campbell, Ky., reportedly is in a high-state of readiness and quickly could be whipped into final shape for overseas duty.

General Charles L. Bolté, USA, told the American Legion Convention in the Nation's Capital that the plan to launch division rotation is "of most far-reach-

Pay Boost Under Top-Level Study CNO Says, Reports 'Attractiveness' Needs

The Defense Department is considering "an across-the-board" pay raise for military personnel, according to Admiral Robert B. Carney, USN, who declares that despite substantial progress since publication of the Womble Report, "achievements to date do not measure up to either our needs or our desires."

The Chief of Naval Operations makes this statement in a letter to VAdm. A. S. Merrill, USN-Ret., an official of the Navy League.

Citing need for a pay raise as a "big thing" to raise the security of a military career, Admiral Carney said he would not endeavor to predict what the Defense Department and Congress will do about it.

He contended that a pay boost "would put military people in a position to better cope with the increased cost of living."

In spite of "discouraging" set-backs such as the new Internal Revenue Code "which gives tax relief to every-

FLAT HAT NAMES

Sailors' flat hats soon again may carry ship identification on the hat band to boost morale. The practice was abandoned in the Spring of 1941 for security reasons. one living on retired pay except retired members of the Armed Services," the Operations Chief said he would continue to exert his full efforts toward improving the lot of those who make a career of the Naval Services.

At the next session of Congress, he said the Navy will ask for a bill which will provide military personnel with a lump sum payment to aid in defraying the cost of moving household goods on change of duty orders.

The Budget Bureau is studying a law to reduce restrictions on "dual" employment which will permit retired personnel to take a civil service job and earn up to $6,250 without jeopardizing retirement pay, he said.

The Bureau is also working on a pro-

It's Official: No Wearing of Green Until September '56; O.D. Stays 'Til '60

The Army has made it official: there will be no wearing of the green uniform by officers or enlisted men until 1 Sept. 1956.

And the present schedule, as approved by the Defense Department and Budget Bureau, will retain the familiar O.D. (Shade 33) in active service until late 1960.

As reported last week, pressure is certain to develop, however, from the textile industry and from clothing manufacturers to permit optional purchase of the new garb earlier than September 1956. Acceleration of the uniform schedule is a possibility.

The Army had planned to permit voluntary purchase and wear of the Green Uniform in 1955, but the Defense Department and BOB put out restraining instructions. These were aimed at insuring that present uniform inventories are utilized.

Present plans call for the Army to start issuing the green uniform to sol-

ROPA Provides Added General-Flag Rank; 6 Sept. Deadline For Presidential Action

The five military services will be authorized almost twice the number of generals and admirals they now have on their active status lists if President Eisenhower signs the Reserve Officer Personnel Act.

Deadline date for the President's signature on ROPA is next Monday. By that date, 6 Sept., he either will have approved the measure, or by failure to act will have killed it by "pocket veto."

Some observers expect the President to sign the plan without delay; others see a veto in view of the earlier White House request that Congress delay action on the bill until the Administration submits its new Reserve Forces program.

If approved, the Act will give the Armed Forces authority to make 419 general and flag officers, compared with 254 now in an active status. Of this number, 30 additional general officers are authorized for the Army, 91 for the Air Force, three for the Marine Corps, 39 admirals for the Navy and two for the

The Legion Gets The Word In Capital In Reports From Top Defense Officials

Current and projected problems and policies of the nation's defense were outlined in Washington to the American Legion Convention. These related notably to steps being taken to raise Service Attractiveness and to the critical need for strengthening the Reserve Forces.

Must Strengthen Reserve, Declares President

President Eisenhower, declaring that "wishful thinking and political timidity must no longer bar a program so absolutely essential to our defense," told the Legion that a program to bolster the Nation's Reserve Forces would be "a No. 1 item" in the Administration's 1955 legislative program.

The Chief Executive said "we have failed miserably to maintain that strong, ready military reserve in which we have believed—or professed belief—for 150 years."

The President did not spell out details of the forthcoming program, but stressed to the Legionnaires that the new program "will not unfairly burden men who have already served."

JCS Chairman Says Reserve "Not Adequate"

The President's pledge for action to build up the Reserve came on the heels of an address by Admiral Arthur Radford, USN, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, in which he told the Legion that "our Reserve Forces are not adequate to meet the needs of our national security. If we are to be prepared to fight a war utilizing our Reserves, we must have Reserves which are organized, trained and administered so as to be effective in any kind of emergency. For this we need more than just trained individuals; we must have complete organizations which can begin functioning on very short notice."

Admiral Radford devoted considerable time in his address to stressing the need for improved manpower quality in the active forces. Calling upon the Legion to assist in the campaign to raise Service Attractiveness, the JCS Chairman said "qualified men are today our number one, all-important requirement."

He said that "our personnel policies, and our national attitude toward the man in uniform must be such that good men are attracted to lifetime Service careers."

Col. Rader In "Readiness" Post at ARDC Hdqs.

Col. W. S. Rader, USAF, former Chief of the Strategic Air Division, Air Research and Development Command, has been named Assistant for Operational Readiness at ARDC headquarters, Baltimore, Md.

He succeeds Col. Joseph R. Holzapfle, USAF who has been assigned to the National War College. Colonel Rader was Chief of the Atomic Energy Training Branch and Chief of the Technical Training Division, USAF headquarters in Washington, D. C., before assignment to ARDC.

Col. Nathan Folwell Heads AMC Services Division

Col. Nathan T. Folwell, USAF, who has been director of supply and services at Gentile AFB, Ohio, since July 1953, has replaced Col. Howard Moore, USAF, as chief of the Air Force Services Division at Headquarters, Air Material Command, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

Colonel Moore became commander of the 2851st ABW at Kelly AFB, San Antonio, Tex., 1 Sept.

Colonel Folwell is married to the former Elizabeth Miller of Philadelphia and has two grown sons. One of them, Nathan T. Folwell, IV, is undergoing Aviation Cadet training at Marana AB, Tucson, Ariz.

New 7th Army G-1

Col. Joseph L. Chabot, Seventh Army G-1 has returned to the United States for assignment to the Pentagon and has been succeeded by Col. John T. Corley, until recently a student at the Army War College.

General Bolte Tells "Career" Progress

General Charles L. Bolté, Army Vice Chief of Staff, outlined for delegates attending the National Convention the complexities in the Army personnel picture, compounded by the fact that over half the men in the Army are two-year selectees. He described the need for increased reenlistments and related steps which are being taken to achieve this objective.

General Bolté described beneficial results from the recently reenlistment bonus and housing legislation and the increase in weight allowance for shipment of household goods.

He said other legislation will be asked, including a Family Medical Care bill and a measure to permit an increase in Regular Army officer strength.

Touching on the Reserve problem, General Bolté said "we have reached the conclusion that it is impossible to attain the minimum required strength in Reserve units by voluntary methods."

The Vice Chief of Staff summarized his address by saying that "our greatest single need is for understanding. If the American people understand the Army's objectives, I am convinced that they will be generous in their support."

General White Cites AF Personnel Loss

Pointing out that "military pay and benefits have not kept pace with civilian pay and advantages," General Thomas D. White, Air Force Vice Chief of Staff, said "we are losing highly skilled officers and men faster than we can replace them."

He said, "we have got to pay these men, house them and care for them, not only at a level commensurate with their skills and responsibilities, but also in recognition of lives devoted to public service."

General White's remarks concerning manpower problems were made against the background of his statement that 126 Air Force wings may not be enough. "If the Soviets continue to lower their living standards and to make great sacrifices in order to enlarge their air power," he declared, "we may have to revise our own plans."

General White said the U.S. has superiority in airplanes and in flight crews and in overall offensive air strength, "although the Communist Air Force has many thousands more combat aircraft than we."

The Air Force Vice Chief of Staff said the U.S. Air Force is also stronger because of the fact that "the Soviets divide and limit their tactical air power much as we used to do in our Army Air Corps by organizing them as parts of the surface forces."

British Officer Seeks War Signals & Dispatches

Capt. J. C. Broome, RN (Ret.) has undertaken the task of compiling and illustrating some of the more memorable (and printable) signals and dispatches which were transmitted at sea by Allied naval forces during World War II. Publication by an English firm is planned.

Captain Broome, in addition to being a veteran of the Royal Navy, is a cartoonist and illustrator, former managing editor of the magazine Sketch, and more recently served as technical director of the British film, "The Cruel Sea."

The only qualifications are that the signal or dispatch was actually sent and is now unclassified; that the story of the circumstances is reasonably short; and the text of the signal or dispatch be interesting or amusing, or both—in short, that it be memorable and printable! Credit to the source will be given for all material used.

Such material to be sent to: Capt. John C. Broome, RN(Ret.), 4, Sprimont Place, Chelsea, S.W. 3, Knightsbridge 1654, England.

282 Cdrs. Picked For Four-Stripe Rank; Board Dips Below Zone For Eleven Men

For the second time since passage of the Officer Personnel Act, and for the first time in the past six years, a Navy Board dipped below the promotion zone in making selections for captain.

Selection Boards, which convened on 10 August and concluded deliberations 10 days later, picked 282 Line commanders for four-stripe rank.

Two of the officers named are Reserve officers on active duty.

All the selections have been approved by President Eisenhower.

The board dropped down 281 names to pick up the junior man, Cdr. Prescott H. Currier, USN, who was included in a group of 11 named from below the zone.

Fifteen of the officers named for advancement were chosen from above the zone, and 256 were selected from within the zone. Seventy others in the zone were passed over.

The fiscal year '49 board selected 17 officers from below the zone. Until this year's board, which named 11 commanders, no other board named officers from below the zone with the exception of the fiscal '52 board which picked only one officer below the zone.

This year's board considered officers with dates of rank of 1 July 1951, and earlier.

All of those named for up-grade have dates of rank as commander from 1944, with the exception of the 11 below the zone who have dates of rank from 1945.

Selected officers are from the classes of 1931 through 1941. The majority named for a fourth stripe are from the classes of 1935 and 1936.

Approved were 233 unrestricted Line commanders, 20 EDO's, 17 AEDO's and 12 SDO's.

A further analysis of the Register reveals that 83 are Naval Aviators.

Seven of the SDO's are specialists in law, three in communications, one in public information, and another in naval intelligence.

The Navy said that about 100 promotions will be effected for unrestricted officers as soon as they qualify. Their dates of rank will be 1 July. Their contemporaries in the restricted Line will be advanced at the same time. The remaining promotions will be made as vacancies occur.

The names of those to be advanced in rank are as follows on the lineal list:

DOWN HILL TREND

A steady down-hill trend is apparent in the number of Line commanders selected each year for captain from within the Navy's promotion zones. For the past five years the percentage of zone selections has dropped annually. This year 79.5 per cent were named from the zone; in fiscal '54, 80 per cent; in fiscal '53, 83 per cent; in fiscal '52, 84 per cent; in fiscal '51, 89 per cent. By law, the Navy is permitted to select up to five per cent from below the zone. This year almost four per cent were so selected.

Only two Naval Reservists were selected for promotion to captain by this year's board. This is the smallest group of active duty Reservists to be named for four-stripes since fiscal '50.

Gen. Noble Heads Lejeune

Maj. Gen. Alfred H. Noble, USMC, has assumed command of MCB, Camp Lejeune, N. C. In formal ceremonies this week, he took over from Brig. Gen. Edward W. Snedeker, USMC, who, during the illness of Maj. Gen. Lewis B. "Chesty" Puller, USMC, has been acting as Second Division Commanding General, as well as Base Commanding General.

In the future, the commands will be separate ones as they were before Maj. Gen. Henry D. Linscott, USMC, relinquished command of the Base to General Puller nearly two months ago. The move was necessary so that General Linscott could assume command of the Department of the Pacific on schedule.

General Noble arrived from Holland where he was Chief, MAAG, Holland, for the past two years. Before that, he was Commanding General, Department of the Pacific.

Wearing of the Green Off Until Sept. 1956

diers in September 1956 on the basis of one green uniform and one O.D.

Probably two more years will pass before both issued uniforms are of the green shade.

The Pentagon said "by the latter part of 1960 it is anticipated that wearing of Olive Drab by the active Army will be prohibited."

Here's a rundown on the accessories that will be worn with the new uniform, most of them previously reported in THE JOURNAL.

Shoes socks and necktie—black.

Service caps — Army green. Enlisted men wear black leather chin straps; officers and warrant officers, gold or gold-colored chin straps. The visor will be black leather for enlisted men, warrant officers and company grade officers.

Field grade officers will wear gold nylon or rayon oak leaves on the visor, with embroidered gold bullion oak leaves authorized for general officers.

All cap bands will be plain green except for general officers; they will wear embroidered gold bullion oak leaves.

Garrison caps—Army green, with all personal wearing a cord edge braid of matching green. This will replace the present distinctive braids and branch colored pipings.

Poplin shirt—It will be modified slightly to harmonize with the new uniform, but the cotton khaki summer shirt will not be changed.

Chevrons—Green and gold will be the new colors, replacing the present O.D. and black.

Cpl. Promotions Up, M/Sgt. Freeze Sticks

The Army has authorized 30,000 promotions to corporal for September, an increase of 7,000 over the August total, as the total quota for the top four pay grades went up from 39,900 to 45,600.

The September promotion ceilings will permit 700 boosts to E-6, the same number as in August, with 14,900 advancements to E-5, a decrease of 1,300 from the previous month.

Once again, the Army was unable to provide any quota for promotions to master sergeant.

"Army Service Forces"

"The Organization and Role of the Army Service Forces" was published by the Army's Office of the Chief of Military History on 1 Sept.

The volume, written by Dr. John D. Millett, President of Miami University, is based on his personal observation and experience, and official documents including the complete personal files of General Brehon B. Somervell, USA-Ret.

The new work is the latest in a series entitled "The U. S. Army in World War II."

The book is available from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. for $4.25.

More Than Two Thousand Majors Will Be Considered for Temporary Lt. Colonel

Following announcement last week of plans to convene selection boards for temporary promotion to colonel, the Army said this week it would also begin selection of majors to temporary lieutenant colonel during September.

Unofficially, it is estimated that about 2300 majors will be eligible for consideration—all of them with a minimum of four years active service in grade as of 31 Oct. 1954.

Roughly 1500 lieutenant colonels, most of them with at least 10 years active service in grade as of 31 Dec. 1954, will be considered for advancement to colonel.

The "fully qualified" method will be used for the selections to lieutenant colonel. For colonel, the "best qualified" system will be used.

(It was erroneously reported in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL that the enactment or veto of ROPA would have an effect on the method of selection to be used for the advancements to colonel. This error was the result of a transposed line of type. ROPA's fate will have no bearing on procedure for the selections.)

To be eligible for consideration to temporary lieutenant colonel, majors on the Army, JAGC, MC and DC promotion lists must have completed at least 48 months active duty service in grade as of 31 Oct.

1954 the Army said.

Majors on the VC and MSC lists must have 53 months service in grade by 31 Oct., with a 50 month requirement for Chaplains.

The Army has listed the names of majors eligible for promotion consideration in Circular 95.

As was reported last week, the zones of consideration for temporary colonel require completion of 10 years active duty service in grade as of 31 Dec. 1954 for Army, JAGC, and VC officers, with 11 years for MC lieutenant colonels, 9 for those of the Dental Corps and Medical Service Corps and 9 years 1 month service as of 31 Dec. 1954 for Chaplains.

Now THE WORLD'S CHAMPION LONG-RANGE, NON-STOP AIRLINER

New DOUGLAS DC-7C

Adds 1000 miles to non-stop flight limits...

Adds up to 70 mph to cruising speed

Here is the first truly Intercontinental passenger airplane. This Douglas distance champion will carry competitive payloads up to 5000 miles non-stop... makes possible unrefueled flights like those illustrated... and because of its range and speed, promises to revolutionize air travel and airline operations between continents.

Longer wings to carry more fuel also allow engines to be moved further away from the cabin, making the DC-7C even more quiet and comfortable.

Already ordered in quantity by Pan American World Airways, these new model Douglas transports are scheduled to begin intercontinental service in 1956.

U. S. AIR FORCE

No Limit On Weapons Urged by Gen. Twining

Failure to use every weapon in our arsenal, including nuclear weapons, to counter an aggression against this country "might well insure our defeat," General Nathan F. Twining, Chief of Staff of the Air Force, declared 20 Aug.

Speaking at a luncheon at the eighth annual convention of the Air Force Association, General Twining added that "our fingers are not heavy on the trigger and we hope for peace." Proof of our peaceful intentions is indicated by the fact that we already have "sufficient reason for war if we were seeking war," he stated.

General Twining declared that our nation's strategy was based on the use of atomic weapons, and that it was unrealistic to even consider a limited retaliation excluding nuclear weapons.

"We will not appease and we will not surrender," he said. "We must continue to convince the Communist enemy that we will strike back as fast as we can, and as hard as we can. We must continue to count on our capability for a massive counter-attack to keep him in check and to prevent another war."

"We stand firm in the defense of the Free World. In our hands we hold the most powerful gun ever designed. The gun we hold can penetrate directly to the giant whose shadow falls across half the world."

"As long as we hold that gun firmly and steadily, he will not deliberately cause us to fire it. Only if we weaken in our relative strength, or if we seem to waiver in our determination, are we likely to be hit."

NEW "EYES" for the Air Force

—powered by new ALLISON TURBO-JET ENGINES

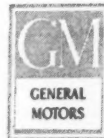

The nation's newest reconnaissance bomber is the swift and versatile, twin-jet RB-66—built for the Air Force by Douglas Aircraft Company, Inc. at Long Beach, California.

In the 600-700 MPH class, the RB-66 is the first production installation of new Allison J71 Turbo-Jet engines in a piloted aircraft. This new power plant produces more thrust per square foot of frontal area than any other known engine.

A single compressor engine, the J71 offers substantial weight savings—with the same capability for quick field maintenance and repair as its predecessor, the Allison J35.

This new engine answers the Air Force's requirement for a high thrust, high compression ratio engine—employing simplicity of design and construction.

Because it meets this requirement, the J71 engine was selected for the RB-66 which will continue to carry out the Douglas tradition for building planes that can fly "faster and farther with a bigger payload."

Let's Have Action. Despite the failure of the Department of Defense or the Administration to take a stand on the problem of lagging pay scales in the Armed Services, there is an increasing trend for officials within the Department to tell the public of the need.

Latest to speak out is Admiral Robert B. Carney, Chief of Naval Operations, who sees a pay raise as a "big thing" in retaining career personnel. Air Force Secretary Harold E. Talbott already has made a pledge that he will fight for an across-the-board increase for the Services. Former Assistant Secretary of Defense John A. Hannah was insistent that pay is a necessary ingredient in any program of career incentives.

The stumbling block so far is that the question of pay has been "under study"—a study that has never ended. It is imperative that if something is to be done, the study be concluded, concrete proposals drafted, and the educational program for its enactment started well before the 84th Congress convenes.

"For The Common Defense." It is the similarity of their objectives rather than the differences in their means of attaining them that is important in the approaches of Administration and the American Legion to the problem of manpower for National Defense.

President Eisenhower in his address to the Legion stressed the vital need for the building of a combat-ready reserve to meet the Communist threat. He did not mention Universal Military Training, although what he talked of had a similar ring and carried the promise that it "will not unfairly burden men who have already served." The Legion believes heartily in these objectives but, as shown in the resolution adopted by its National Security Committee, believes in straight-out UMT, rather than the combination Selective Service-Reserve plan briefly described by the retiring Assistant Secretary of Defense, Dr. John A. Hannah.

The future of our defenses lies in the hope that in view of the aims of the Administration and the powerful influence of the American Legion, Congress will be brought to act. There is already on the statute books Public Law 51 which approves the principle of UMT, but Congress has consistently declined to implement it. In fact, throughout history Congress has shied from taking the responsibility for permitting American youth to be trained for the rigors of war. George Washington's plan for the universal training of all men 17 years of age was cut to pieces and finally emerged from Congress with no resemblance to the original UMT plan. In our times, it is hard to conceive that less than four months before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor the extension of the Selective Service Act passed the House of Representatives by the frightening vote of 203 to 202. Had one member switched from the yea to the nay side the Army of 1,500,000 (including the Air Force), which Selective Service had built from a little more than 100,000, would have been totally wrecked on the eve of our greatest peril.

In fact UMT was the one big lesson taught us by each war. After World War I General John J. Pershing urged it. The final report of General of the Army George C. Marshall cited UMT as "the most democratic expression of our national life." General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, in his final report as Chief of Staff, declared that UMT was an "essential measure" and that it must be a "vigorously prosecuted activity in our preparatory processes until we can be assured that danger of global war belongs only to history."

Commissioned Rank

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I resent very much the statement by Capt. Forrest C. Blodgett, CE, in last week's issue to the effect that "for some time now the military officer has been prostrated by the bestowing of commissioned rank on all manner of things." I consider it an insult to every officer who has served, or who is serving his country in some branch other than a combat arm. One Medical Officer that I know of went on to become Chief of Staff of the Army. I am speaking of General Leonard Wood, a distinguished physician and officer. According to Capt. Blodgett the Army should have never commissioned him in the first place since he was a physician. I might also mention a Dental Officer, who was killed in Korea while trying to move his enlisted men and equipment from one place to another. I suppose he is one of those who has prostrated the military officer. There are many others who have distinguished themselves in the Medical Corps, Dental Corps, Judge Advocate General's Corps and the Chaplains Corps; and many in these branches have made the supreme sacrifice for their country. Still others have held, and are holding positions of high command responsibility with distinction.

The statement "that in most cases it can be found that such persons neither appreciate or respect military work and the responsibilities imposed thereby," is a purely personal opinion of Capt. Blodgett and without any basis of fact.

I for one appreciate and respect military rank and the responsibilities imposed thereby, and I am certain that an overwhelming majority of officers in branches such as Medical Corps, Dental Corps, JAG, etc., do also.

Also if commissioned rank is to be denied to all officers other than those in command positions, the Corps of Engineers would have to be included since many positions in that Corps are technical rather than command positions.

Ranks and Eggs

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

'Twas most gratifying to read of the Army's first good uniform decision in a coon's age, namely: scrambled eggs for cap visors of Majors and up. Aside from the historical fact (perhaps considered for a change?) that majors and up have had same on dress uniform visors for a good many years, I can see quite plainly the cold, clear logic which led to this decision.

Basically, scrambled eggs are designed to mark those who have arrived, to set them apart from less responsible, less accomplished, less noteworthy individuals. And here we see unification in full flower—across the board equivalence in mark of distinction. Navy commanders have been egg-bespattered (& deservedly so) for lo! these many years. Since the Army, selfless, publicity avoiding to a man, wore no gingerbread on daily uniforms, the Navy's criterion was accepted as a point of departure. Doubtless it was even so when our fledgling Air Force adopted it (Zowie!) lightnings as a birdman equivalent of the time-honored scrambled eggs. Doubtless, indeed, for in the Air Force these thunderbolts are vouchsafed to colonels only. Had they been extended to lieutenant colonels, the equivalent service plan for UMT. But again nothing was done.

We believe that Congress, in holding back from some form of UMT underestimates the determination and willingness of the American people to safeguard peace by being prepared for war.

But there is now hope that the new Congress will go to work on the reserve-build-up plan to be submitted to it by the Administration and from that basis come up with a law that will train our youth and fill out our Reserve forces.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—The equivalent of 20 Infantry Divisions (enemy) have been eliminated and a further 12 very badly cut up and have suffered severe losses. In the air, the Luftwaffe has taken a fearful beating. Since 6 June, 378 German airplanes have been destroyed in the air and 1,167 on the ground. At sea the enemy has been unable to interfere seriously with the Invasion Forces.

50 Years Ago—Regardless of how it may end, the siege of Port Arthur will become historic if for no other reason than that it involves a more thorough test of the relative values of modern ordnance and modern explosives than the world has ever witnessed.

90 Years Ago—The recent act of Congress increasing the pay of soldiers is received with general approbation by every officer. Those only who are in daily contact with them, and in part sharers of their dangers and sufferings, can really appreciate the value to the country of the services of the private soldiers. This acknowledgement of that worth was encouragement and assistance. But the same Congress which raised the pay of the soldier reduced the pay of his officer.

lent (in pay) of commanders, the distinction would have embraced the majority of the Air Force, rather than the intended select few.

Having thus established a very clear line of equivalence across the services, it was but a step, nay, it was effortless to arrive at the eminently appropriate decision to have Army majors wear the scrambled eggs along with their demonstrated peers in the other services.

"Chevrons" and "Command"

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

May I add my bit to what I hope is a flood of commendation for the two letters published in the 21 Aug. JOURNAL?

That on "Chevrons" is super. But it is too simple to appeal to or be understood by the Pentagon.

The other on "command" should get some action—most of it from the vets, dentists, etc., should any consideration be started. We had it once in my early days.

And "farewell Army Russet Brown" stirred nostalgic memories. All my military life I missed no chance to say a word for Cadet Gray as the proper color for uniform—an idea born while wearing it, and noting horses apparently riderless, moving in the hills above the Hudson. The cadet gray blended with the landscape as no other color has done. And wear—well many a Cadet in those days made one pair of riding breeches serve three years of use! Economical armies usually have one color for uniform. When a best suit becomes a bit shabby, it continues to serve as "second best" for drills, etc. But then the great U.S. has no need to practice such an antiquated virtue.

Admiral Carney Reports Progress In Career Incentives—But Not Enough

posed bill designed to eliminate the "inequities and inadequacies of the present pension system for the families of men who die on active duty."

The proposed pension would be the same for Regulars and Reserves and would be based on a percentage of the man's pay.

It is also intended, the Admiral continued, to ask Congress to bring all military personnel under social security on a regular contributory basis. It is further hoped, he said, that an additional provision will be passed permitting educational benefits to veterans in uniform, such as assistance with night school courses.

While career attractiveness incentives do not, as yet, meet the needs and desires of the Navy, he summarized some of the major accomplishments in this field as follows:

OFFICERS PROMOTIONS—have been tightened up as a spur to superior performance of duty. The Navy has returned to the practice of "selecting out" Regular officers whose capabilities do not justify promotion to higher grades. By next year, professional standards will include correspondence courses and the reinstitution of promotion examinations. The new programs will apply to Temporary and Reserve officers on active duty.

SEPARATIONS—of enlisted personnel who are unsuitable or who are not performing satisfactorily have been ordered. Reenlistments are limited to those who meet service requirements.

INTEGRATION—of the best Reserve officers who are retained in the rank of lieutenant will be possible as they are offered an opportunity to transfer to the Regular Navy.

RESIGNATIONS—are now permitted from officers after four years of service with the exception of those who have special voluntary commitments.

RETIREMENT—applications from older officers are being accepted after 20 or more years service, on a carefully controlled and restricted basis and will remain in effect if the plan is not abused "to a point where the service suffers."

DISCIPLINE—steps will be taken to increase the authority of commanding officers to enforce routine discipline. Absenteeism is particularly discouraged so that the general work load will be more evenly distributed.

COMMAND TOURS—have been lengthened (last week's JOURNAL, page one). A new Deputy Chief of Naval Operations, VAdm. R. P. Briscoe, USN, (Fleet Operations and Readiness), has been appointed with sole responsibility in the field of operations. One of his jobs is to find ways to reduce tensions and presures on individuals serving on fleet assignment. Over-all training responsibilities have been turned over to the Commanders of the First and Second Fleets so that training needs can be better dovetailed into operating schedules.

MORALE—has been upped by the reinstitution of the officers' dress uniform and the use of the sword. In order to give all officers and men the feeling that they are an important part of the Navy team, sea commanders have been instructed to keep their commands as informed as possible on the nature and purpose of all missions.

To increase the individual's sense of identification with his unit the Navy is considering a return to the old style hat band which carries the name of the man's ship or unit. Names will be given to large amphibious craft rather than numbers.

The prestige of petty officers will be increased by the authorization of rating badges on dungaree work uniforms.

CONCURRENT TRAVEL—is permitted wherever possible. In certain foreign duty stations, where housing is in short supply, steps are being taken to cut down the waiting time for families to be transported. Men are no longer required to use government quarters and messing facilities while traveling with their families to foreign duty stations.

SHIPBOARD LIVING—conditions are being made more attractive. Two destroyers and a submarine have been extensively altered in "habitability" experiments aimed at providing recreational spaces, crew lounge, better sleeping quarters, more ample clothing space, and a more appetizing food service.

HOUSING—unit numbers will be increased as a result of the passage of the Wherry Act; steps are being taken to reduce rental charges on sub-standard housing.

HOUSEHOLD GOODS—shipping weight allowances have been secured by a recent budgetary change which permits an increase of 2,000 pounds over old restrictions, except for flag officers.

REENLISTMENT BONUSES—have been increased from $160 to $360 with the provision for a phased scale ranging from $240 to $1,238. It is later hoped to increase the minimum to $1,000.

Other benefits accruing to service personnel, Admiral Carney pointed out, include USCOA, a law providing G. I. home loans for veterans who remain in the service, and the adoption of "contract tours" of duty for Reserve officers.

The Navy is on the way to finding solutions to problems which it can solve itself, he said, and is pursuing that course "without a defeatist attitude."

Summer White House At Lowry AFB Brings Few Changes In Base's Operation

For the second time in as many years Lowry Air Force Base, Colo., is host to President Dwight D. Eisenhower as the nation's chief executive moves to Denver to squeeze in a few hours of relaxation between the heavy demands of his job.

Strictly in keeping with the President's desires, a minimum of time and effort went into the task of setting up the Summer White House at Lowry. By the same token the presence of the Commander-in-Chief on the Base has not changed the busy program of the 3415th Technical Training Group with its manifold functions.

Actual work began in mid-June when Lt. Col. George J. McNally, USA, White House Communications Officer; Mr. A. Wayne Hawks, Chief of Records for the White House; Lt. Col. William G. Draper, USAF, commander of the Presidential Aircraft, The Columbine, and Presidential Air Force Aide; and Lt. Col. Robert L. Schulz, USA, Military Aide to President Eisenhower, arrived at Lowry for advance planning.

Brig. Gen. John T. Sprague, base commander, appointed Maj. Charles J. Pinto, Wing Training and Operations Officer, to serve as White House Project Officer, a task he also held during the 1953 Summer White House.

Working with a handful of personnel, Major Pinto prepared the second floor of the Wing Headquarters building to house the executive offices. After moving some Wing Staff agencies to temporary quarters, Major Pinto's crew performed a general house-cleaning—a routine annual job, delayed so that the offices would be in top shape during the President's stay.

The small force touched up paint inside the building, washed and waxed floors, and moved in office furniture loaned for the occasion by the General Services Administration. Colorful drapes, rugs and a special chair for the President are the only details that distinguish the offices from those of any other federal agency.

The one small office set aside for the President serves normally as a room for quaterning visiting VIP's.

Simultaneous with preparation of the offices, training was conducted for a group of about 180 Air Police to handle security of the base during the President's stay. Normally an open base, Lowry continues to open its gates to all who have official business but bars those who only desire to sightsee.

Arrangements also were made to provide the White House correspondents with desks, chairs and telephones set up in a long corridor on the main floor of the headquarters building. Nearby is the press conference room and the office of James C. Hagerty, the President's Press Secretary.

The actual operation of the Summer White House got underway last week when The Columbine flew in an advance party of several administrative personnel from the executive staff.

Included were Mr. Hawks, Miss Mary Caffrey, secretary to Mr. Hagerty; Miss Lorna Holland, Mr. Hawks' secretary; Kenneth Balaska, Mr. Hawks' assistant; Miss Alice Smith, secretary to Thomas Stephens, the President's Secretary; Lt. Col. McNally; Lt. Olive F. G. Marsh, secretary and administrative officer to Maj. Gen. Howard McC. Snyder, MC, USA, Presidential Physician; Joe Giordana, head of the White House transportation section; and Lt. Norton L. Billington, Signal Corps. Colonel Schulz had arrived earlier.

The operation went into full swing with the arrival of the President and his chief aides. On hand to welcome the Chief Executive to Lowry Air Force Base were General Sprague, honor flights of 30 airmen and 30 WAF and an honor guard of 20 Air Police.

New York Times "Shoot and Salute" Editorial Hails "Tough Fighting Force"

The New York Times, taking editorial note of the 1 Sept. requirement for restoration of off-post saluting in the Army, says "the Army is soft-pedaling itself as a place to learn a trade and is concentrating on becoming what it is supposed to be—a tough fighting force."

The Times approves the emphasis in the "Shoot and Salute" editorial, text of which follows:

"For years, since the end of the Second World War, the Army tried to increase its enlistments with promises of good pay, security and the chance to learn a trade. That kind of appeal seemed to be the best one in a country with democratic traditions of freedom and opportunity. And in the Army itself long-standing military customs were abolished or relaxed. Off-post saluting disappeared. Uniforms of officers and enlisted men became more alike. Numerous other 'soft' policies went into effect.

"PERHAPS SUCH TREATMENT brought more young men into the service, and perhaps they were happier than soldiers of a decade or two before. But it now turns out—and it was inevitable—that a softer Army produces softer fighting men. According to a story in this newspaper, a quiet hardening process has been going on since Korea. The story emphasizes what officers have been saying—that our troops in Korea fought well but that have fought more efficiently.

"AS A RESULT of the Korean lesson, physical conditioning and night training have been stepped up. Noncommissioned officers have received more authority. Discipline is being tightened. In short, the Army is soft-pedaling itself as a place to learn a trade and is concentrating on becoming what it is supposed to be—a tough fighting force. The newspaper story says field generals want troops who can shoot and salute. We agree with the Army's forceful new program to that end. A little less democracy in the Army may, in the long run, mean saving democracy in the country."

MEMONews and Gossip
For Journal Readers*

THERE'S A GROWING CONVICTION at the Pentagon that some sort of "understanding" has been developed between President Eisenhower and Defense Secretary Wilson regarding military pay. The crux is believed to be this: that if the Administration supports a pay hike for the Government's civilian employees, it will do the same for the military.

TWO DEVELOPMENTS give credibility to this speculation. First was the studied decision of Secretary Wilson to refrain from exerting the pressure of his office on behalf of a military pay raise, notwithstanding the advice of many top aides, including former Asst. SecDef. Hannah and AF Sec'y Talbott, who have argued consistently for a pay adjustment. Mr. Wilson's decision to take neither a positive pro or con position on a pay raise may well have been predicated on an explicit or implied understanding with the Chief Executive that there would be equitable treatment for those in uniform.

THE FACT THAT THE PRESIDENT went out of his way in the veto message on the 5% civilian pay raise to comment on military morale matters strengthens the belief that in the 84th Congress military pay will be linked directly to pay of postal and civil service employees. Meantime, the pay situation, at the order of Mr. Wilson, remains "under study."

THE EISENHOWER ADMINISTRATION, which will make strengthening of the Reserve Forces a top priority matter in the 84th Congress, will find itself walking a tight political public relations line next year. Any plan to tamper with the status quo of Reserve Forces provokes automatic controversy. A major overhaul, such as is promised, will mean plenty of fireworks. That's as certain as the fact that something drastic needs to be done to assure the Nation an effective Reserve.

ON THE ONE HAND, the President and his aides undoubtedly will tend to tie the new plan to the long-standing attitudes of U.M.T. advocates, such as the American Legion and the influential members of the National Security Training Commission, including Maj. Gen. Julius Ochs Adler, USAR, of the New York Times.

BUT AT THE SAME TIME, Administration strategists will seek to avoid, if they can, the previous opposition to U.M.T. which has developed on Capitol Hill, among other places, and therefore at times will play down the U.M.T. angle.

WHEN ALL IS SAID, the new plan for the Reserve Forces will be, in effect, Universal Selective Service, fortified by the vital requirement of compulsory service in civilian component units.

COMPULSORY SERVICE won't be voted by Congress in speedy fashion. Legislators are certain to be reluctant. It's believed, however, that they can be convinced (1) if all young men serve; and (2) if there's hope thereby that the two-year draft tour can be shortened.

THE AMERICAN LEGION made plain during the National Convention in Washington that its legislative guns could be counted on in the next Congress to back up the Defense Department's offensive for improved family medical care. In no mean uncertain terms, the Legion blasted efforts by the American Medical Association to curtail treatment of veterans for so-called non-service connected disabilities in VA hospitals.

THE AMA LEADERSHIP has for years been conducting a twin-pronged offensive, aimed at reducing dependent care for military families and curtailing the government-sponsored treatment of veterans. As a consequence, there's no doubt the Legion, sympathetic anyway, will lend forceful support to the Pentagon's medical care plan.

THE VA'S TOP DOCTOR, VAdm. Joel T. Boone, MC, USN-Ret., Medal of Honor winner in WWI for service with the Marines, told the Legion he will resist any attempts to reduce medical care for veterans. Military personnel will remember that it was Admiral Boone who played a key role in the "fat into muscle" pre-Korea economy days in convincing Congress that there would be drastic results if family medical care were curtailed, as planned by the Defense Department at that time.

MARINE CORPS active participation in JCS deliberations is now on a one-out-of five basis. Lt. Gen. Randolph McC. Pate, USMC, Assistant Commandant, advised the American Legion that his Service is in on about 20% of the JCS deliberations. The Marine Corps Commandant has co-equal status with members of the JCS during discussion of matters of direct concern to the Corps.

INCREASING DIFFERENTIATION between emoluments for career military personnel and draftees may be in the cards—particularly if at a later date it is possible to cut the tour of inductees below two years. First inkling of such a development came in an amendment to the National Housing Act.

THAT LEGISLATIVE CHANGE, authorizing home loan benefits for Servicemen, specified that individuals must have two years service or more. This eliminates draftees from the benefit, unless they sign up for extended service.

THE DAYTON AIR SHOW, says the Air Force, "will be the largest and most complete display of Air Force equipment, within security limitations, ever to be placed before the American public." Among the Washington diplomatic set invited by the Air Force is Maj. Gen. Victor N. Kuvinov, USSR air attache.

LOOK for the Army to go after the helicopter altitude record now that it has set a speed record with its new Sikorsky XH-39. WO Billy I. Webster flew the new 'copter 156.005 MPH to better the record of 146.735 set last year by Capt. Russell M. Dobyns, USAF, in a Piasecki H-21. Army fliers would like very much to hold two records to emphasize the growing stature of Army aviation.

NORTH AMERICAN HAS BUILT MORE AIRPLANES THAN ANY OTHER COMPANY IN THE WORLD

"O.K...You're on your own"

Moments ago his instructor said, "Good luck son. Now you try it alone." And as the young cadet turns to his plane he feels a sudden thrill run through him. He is sure he's ready...after those long months of tough, hard training. And he is ready. He'll win his wings, because those who chose him know he has the qualities a pilot must possess.

You too can know the same thrill that young man feels now...if you have the stuff in you to become an aviation cadet. Ahead of you lies a great adventure...flying with the U. S. Navy or Air Force in the planes that guard our nation's shores.

You'll meet them all. Planes like this T-28, North American's trainer for the Navy and Air Force, that outflies many World War II fighters. And when you've won your wings you may graduate to a squadron that flies FJ-3 Fury Jets, Korea-famed F-86 Sabre Jets...or America's fastest production jet fighter, the supersonic F-100 Super Sabre.

Yes, there's high adventure ahead for you, if you take the challenge a flying career in the services offers now...if you're ready to be on your own.

QM Trng. Command Creates New Posts

Maj. Gen. F. C. Holbrook, USA, Commanding General, QMTC at Ft. Lee, Va., has announced major changes in the command echelon of the Quartermaster Training Command.

The two major changes in the command create the posts of Deputy QMTC Commander, which calls for a brigadier general, and the Deputy Post Commander, which is a colonel's slot.

Other changes include an assistant to the Chief of Staff, and liaison officers from Assistant Chief of Staffs, G-1 and G-4, with Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3.

Col. Sam N. Lowry, former commanding officer, Charlotte QM Depot, Charlotte, N. C., has been named Deputy Post Commander. He assumed his duties this week.

The Deputy Commander of the QMTC has not been announced.

GEN. BRADLEY'S OFFICE WINS PRAISE

General of the Army Omar N. Bradley's office, designed by F. V. Gerstel, Inc., has been selected to open a new pictorial feature in Management Methods magazine entitled "Where They Work," the new series beginning in the September issue will be devoted to a write-up of private offices of prominent business leaders.

General Bradley's office was chosen as a particularly successful integration of personal tastes and executive needs. An Air Force polar map, the General's own five-star flag and a portrait of Washington are design elements of individuality. Informal seating and warm paneling contribute to the Board Chairman's "home away from home" at the Bulova Research and Development Laboratory in Queens, New York

AF Will Demonstrate Four Major Missions At Air Show; Eight Commands Participate

The Air Force will demonstrate four major missions at the National Aircraft Show which takes place this weekend at Dayton, Ohio.

Approximately 200 AF planes will converge on the city to show observers how the Air Force is carrying out its Air Defense, Strategic Air, Tactical Air and Air Transport operations.

Air Force officials said "It will be the largest and most complete display of Air Force equipment, within security limitations, ever to be placed before the American public." Latest experimental models and guided missiles will be included among the aircraft.

F-100 and F-102 jet fighters and the B-52, latest jet bomber, will be on public display for the first time.

Supporting the AF operation will be eight major Air Force commands within the continental U. S. From overseas SAC bases in England, 12 Boeing B-47 Stratojets will arrive each day during the three-day show.

Planning, control and execution of the AF portion of the Show is under the direction of the Air Proving Ground Command with Col. M. F. Peterson as project officer. In addition, APGC will conduct and participate in the Thompson Trophy and Bendix Trophy events.

SAC, in addition to providing fighters and bombers, will participate in the Bendix Trophy event. TAC will demonstrate cargo-type aircraft and join in the Allison Trophy event.

The Air Materiel Command will provide all logistical support including billets, messing, transportation and refueling; inspection teams for the Bendix and Allison events; and space for aircraft taking part in the show to land and take off from Wright-Patterson.

ARDC will conduct and participate in the General Electric Trophy event and participate in the Bendix Trophy event. Personnel from the Command also will assist the National Aeronautic Association in timing all special events.

ATC will participate in the Bendix and Allison Trophy Events and will provide a commentator, Col. Clay Tice, jr., for the AF portion of the Show.

MATS personnel and equipment will furnish communications facilities for all four military Services; the Air Weather Service of MATS will provide normal weather reporting and forecasting in addition to special enroute weather information for the Bendix event; the Air Rescue Service of MATS will standby along the Bendix route and in the Dayton area to assist in case of emergency; and MATS will furnish a new Convair C-131 air evacuation plane for ground display.

The new Fairchild C-123 Avitruc, capable of airlifting and landing 61 combat troops and equipment will be on ground display. In all, more than two dozen USAF aircraft will be open to public inspection.

Twelve F-86F North American Sabrejets will be flown through the sound barrier each day at the Show to mark the AF's hour-long aerial display. They will be led by Korean jet ace Maj. Frederick Blesse.

Twenty-nine top USAF airmen will join in the four major events at the Show: the Bendix, Thompson, Allison and General Electric trophy events. All four events will be run exclusively with USAF jets.

Navy Shows Anti-Sub 'Copter At Air Show

The Navy's Bell HSL-1 anti-submarine helicopter will be unveiled to the public this week-end at the National Air Show, Dayton, Ohio.

Capable of all-weather operations for as much as three and one half hours, the new sub-killer will be flown at 120 knots and made to stand still in mid-air.

The tandem-rotor craft, crammed with the latest dipping type sonar listening gear and light-weight homing armament, is both a "hunter" and "killer." It is powered by a single Pratt & Whitney R-2800 engine.

Featuring folding rotor blades, casting wheels, hinged engine assembly and compact size to facilitate shipboard service, the 'copter also has a Bell-designed autopilot.

Immediately following its unveiling at Dayton, including flight demonstrations and static display, the 'copter will be continued on its delivery flight from Ft. Worth, Tex., to the Naval Air Test Center at Patuxent River, Md. The craft is piloted by Lt. Robert W. Edwards and Bell Pilot Bill Quinlan.

Army Fliers Take Part In National Air Show

"Immediate retaliation" will be the keynote of the Army's role at the National Air Show, Dayton, Ohio, this week-end.

Infantry and artillery troops will be 'copter-lifted into a roaring mock battle climaxed by an imitation atomic blast from a theoretical 280mm cannon. The demonstration will be staged to dramatize the Army's readiness for "immediate retaliation" against possible communist aggression.

Col. William B. Bunker, Commandant of the Army Transportation School, Ft. Eustis, Va., said the Army is developing the capability of moving powerful combat units—"an entire army if necessary"—by air to any battlefield the enemy might choose.

Every type of Army helicopter and fixed wing plane will either participate in the show or be on display for the public.

Also on display, for the first time in the Dayton area, will be a group of Army guided missiles, as well as models of rockets and guided missiles now in production.

The Army's famous helicopter square dance team from Ft. Sill will go through its intricate precision flying to the tune of Tennessee Wagoner. Other Army acts will include short-run take-offs and landings, dead-stick landings and evasive tactics.

Lt. Col. Charles W. Matheny, jr., Deputy Assistant Commandant of the Army Aviation School, Ft. Sill, will act as Army Operations Officer for the air show. Lt. Col. Charles Ernest, Deputy Director of the Department of Flight, Army Aviation School, will be the Flight Demonstration Officer.

The Army's giant new "Peeping Tom" camera will be on hand to take pictures of the Show. The 100-inch infra-red camera lens cuts through atmospheric haze to photograph objects as much as 35 miles away.

■ LONDON, ENGLAND. "The Reserve is the backbone of our Armed Forces," stated Maj. Gen. Roscoe C. Wilson, USAF, Commander of the Third Air Force, in an address recently before a joint Air Force-Army training unit here.

Pointing out that all reservists are called upon to lead men in time of crises, he listed some of the desirable leadership qualities to which a man might aspire. "Although no man can will himself to be a leader, all men can qualify for leadership by developing the desired abilities," the general explained.

Summarizing, General Wilson emphasized that a good leader should be able to perform three objectives: first, put the right people in the right jobs; second, organize his staff so that the total production is better than the sum total of the individual efforts; and third, provide motivation toward the desired goal.

General Wilson was introduced by Col. Franklin E. Welch, commander of the training unit. The organization meets on first and third Wednesdays of each month at the American Embassy Cafeteria (No. 3 Grosvenor Square) and is open to all reservists.

"DISCOURAGING"

The discrimination against retired members of the Armed Forces in the new Internal Revenue Code is "discouraging" and is a serious setback in the campaign to raise the attractiveness of military service, says Admiral Robert B. Carney, USN, Chief of Naval Operations.

He said another reversal was the decision to deny the Services the right to maintain hospitals in the Canal Zone. "Our men and dependents in that area must now rely for hospitalization on a Canal Zone government that already has difficulty in maintaining adequate medical staffs for its own use," declared the CNO.

At the Pentagon, preparations are under way to ask Congress early next year for repeal of the provision in the tax law which denies to retired military personnel under 65 a deduction—worth up to $240 per year—which is provided for everyone else on public retired lists, such as Municipal, State and Federal employees.

Obituaries

Capt. Joseph McConnell, Jr., USAF

Jet fighters roared overhead 28 August in a final salute to America's ranking jet ace, Capt. Joseph McConnell, Jr., USAF, who was killed 25 August on a routine test flight near Edwards AFB, Calif.

General Otto P. Weyland, USAF, chief of the Tactical Air Command, was among those who paid their final respects. United Nations Air Commander in the Far East when Captain McConnell became the leading jet ace by shooting down 16 enemy MIG's, General Weyland said:

"The country and the Air Force suffered an irreparable and tragic loss" when Captain McConnell crashed to his death in the new model Sabre which he was testing.

"Mac was a gallant leader in combat and an inspiration to our younger fighter pilots."

"During the Korean War he completed the normal Air Force combat tour of 100 missions but requested and was granted an extension in combat. Even though he had become the world's leading jet ace, he wanted to continue fighting with his outfit in still another extension. I then took him off combat against his wishes with the conviction that he had accomplished far more than the average American, and that his experience and combat knowledge would be of greater value in building up our new tactical air units."

"I mourn his untimely alrman's death with his family and his other comrades-in-arms."

Other tributes were paid by high-ranking military and governmental officials. Harold E. Talbott, Secretary of the Air Force, stated that Captain McConnell's death "will be felt as a personal tragedy by a grateful Nation. The cool competence and steadfast courage which distinguished his combat record are rare attributes. The country and the Department of the Air Force have lost an outstanding citizen and champion of freedom."

General Nathan F. Twining, Air Force Chief of Staff, said:

"His courageous combat leadership exemplified the aggressive spirit which has made our country strong and kept the Nation free. In the traditions of the Air Force and the annals of the country he served so devotedly, in the hearts of Americans everywhere, Captain Joseph McConnell will be well remembered."

NEW TURBO-PROP'S FIRST FLIGHT—First takeoff photograph of the Air Force VC-130 which flew recently for the first time. A quick, short takeoff run—about a third the usual distance required by big transports—was made possible by high acceleration of turbo-prop engines in the new cargo-personnel carrier. Built by Lockheed Aircraft Corp., the VC-130 is now undergoing flight tests at Edwards AFB, Calif. Note the unusual landing gear which permits operation from soft, improvised airstrips and the low-to-the-ground fuselage which facilitates loading. It is powered by four Allison T-56 engines turning Curtiss-Wright Turboelectric propellers.

Ord. Officers Will Study Management Course

Maj. Gen. E. L. Cummings, Army Chief of Ordnance, has announced assignment of five lieutenant colonels to the Chicago area beginning next month for a 21 months' course in industrial management. They are Lt. Cols. Herbert R. Dichtenmueller, Burleigh B. Drummond, Joseph M. Heiser, Jr., Charles M. Prosser, and William N. Sloan.

Patterned upon the Army's Industrial Mobilization Training Program, the Ordnance course consists of academic training at the University of Chicago School of Business, coupled with on-the-job practice assignments in the Chicago metropolitan area at the following industrial organizations: Borg-Warner Corporation, Inland Steel Company, International Harvester Company, Motorola, Inc., and Sears, Roebuck & Company.

Completion of the course will lead to award of the M. B. A., degree from the University as well as credit for phase B of the Industrial Mobilization Training Program. Present plans call for enrollment of five individuals each year in the course, to be selected from officers of the Ordnance Corps.

$46 Million Rehab. Job

The Alabama Ordnance Works, which has been on a stand-by basis since WW II, will be rehabilitated at a cost of approximately $46 million.

Work will begin soon and is expected to take about two years for completion. The rehabilitation will affect seven production lines of smokeless powder and other explosives, together with their supporting facilities.

Better Shock-Absorbing Sought for Air-Drops

A research contract with the University of Texas to develop and test improved shock-absorbing devices for cargo air-drops has been announced by Dr. Donald K. Tressler, scientific director of the Quartermaster Food and Container Institute for the Armed Forces.

Earl C. Myers, associate director for research at the Institute's Chicago Container Laboratories, will have over-all charge of the project. Heading the research staff at the Texas University will be J. Neils Thompson of the civil engineering faculty and director of the Structural Mechanics Research Laboratory at the university's Balcones Research Center.

Jet Engine Facilities

A $2 million Air Force facilities contract has been awarded to the Continental Aviation & Engineering Corp. in connection with the company's jet engine program.

The contract provides production facilities for the J69 turbojet.

Huge Tank Plant Placed On Stand-by Status

The Michoud Ordnance Plant in New Orleans, La., 43-acre tank engine production center, has become the nation's largest "stand-by" defense manufacturing installation.

From June 1951 to March 1954 the Chrysler Tank Engine Division produced 810-horsepower Continental tank engines in volume, with peak employment of 2250.

Instead of going into "mothballs" when government contracts terminated, Michoud went on a stand-by schedule. All of the plant's 2400 machines are kept in operating condition, each cleaned and oiled regularly and any defective parts immediately repaired or replaced. Many intricate machines which would deteriorate unless used are periodically operated.

Nevertheless, some of the plant's highly-specialized laboratory equipment, such as gauges and precision tools, required mothballing. Rust-prevention while the plant is on a stand-by basis is effected by the continuous dehumidification of the 2-million-foot plant.

$10 Million Tanker Launching

A $10-million oil tanker, the second of five being built for the Navy by the New York Shipbuilding Corporation, will be launched 11 Sept. at the company's yard in Camden, N. J.

The ship, the USS Hassayampa, will be sponsored by Mrs. James L. Holloway, wife of Vice Admiral Holloway, USN, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations and Chief of Naval Personnel. The Hassayampa and her four sister ships, measuring 665 feet and displacing 40,000-tons, will be among the Navy's largest oilers. The Mississenewa was launched in June.

International 'Copter Service Carries 18,000

Sabena Belgian Airlines, which inaugurated the world's first international services by helicopter on 1 Sept. 1953, carried nearly 18,000 passengers on its regularly-scheduled and special charter flights within Europe during the first year of operations with the American-built S-55's, Fernand J. Martens, U. S. Manager for Sabena, has announced.

Sabena's passenger total on approximately 3,500 "scheduled" international flights was close to 13,000 persons.

Martens said, "This figure of 13,000 passengers transported is all the more significant when one takes into account that it represents one per cent (1%) of the total operations of the company measured in ton-kilometers offered and also when it is compared to the 230,000 passengers carried by conventional airplanes on the company's European routes during the same period."

Sabena's four Sikorsky S-55 helicopters are each capable of transporting 7 passengers with their baggage. Except for a plushier interior and extra insulation, these are the same helicopters as are widely used in U. S. Armed Services.

U. S. COAST GUARD

Secretary of The Treasury—George M. Humphrey
Commandant—Vice Adm. Alfred C. Richmond

TWO U. S. icebreakers have become the first ships to make the passage through the McClure Strait in the Canadian Arctic.

The CG icebreaker Northwind, commanded by Capt. William L. Maloney, USCG, made the perilous trip from west to east during the period 13-21 Aug. She entered from the Arctic Ocean and went through along the southern edge of the Strait.

The second ship, the Navy icebreaker USS Burton Island commanded by Cdr. Everett A. Trickey, USN, made the passage through the middle of the Strait east-to-west during the period 11-16 Aug., and then cut back west-to-east along the northern edge during 16-19 Aug.

The ships, on a joint U. S.-Canadian expedition, carried scientists from both countries who are conducting oceanographic and hydrographic investigations in the area.

McClure Strait lies between Melville Island and Banks Island in the Canadian Far North. It forms the western entrance to the Northwest Passage by connecting the Arctic Ocean and the Viscount Melville Sound.

Both 269-foot icebreakers are equipped with helicopters and are veterans of previous Arctic and Antarctic expeditions. It is expected that they will complete their operations late next month.

The ships are operating as units of Service Squadron One, U. S. Pacific Fleet.

ROPA Analysis Shows Increase In Top Ranks

Coast Guard.

The number of general and flag officers the Services now have in an active status compared with the top number they will be authorized under ROPA is:

|           | Present | ROPA |
|-----------|---------|------|
| Army      | 177     | 207  |
| Navy      | 9       | 48   |
| Air Force | 66      | 157  |
| USMC      | 2       | 5    |
| USCG      | 0       | 2    |

Following its earlier analysis of the bill, THE JOURNAL presents herewith pertinent extracts from the first two Titles of the Act. Provisions in these two sections apply to Reserve officers of all Services.

Title I defines the various terms used in the Act. Title II embraces rules for constructive credit for promotion, selection board procedures, promotion eligibility criteria, retention regulations, and so forth.

The Titles of the Act which concern each of the Services individually will be treated in subsequent issues of THE JOURNAL if the President gives his approval to the measure.

Excerpts from Titles I and II follow:

Title I—Definitions

Reserve Officer—Excludes WO's and CWO's and limits the term to the National Guard of the United States, Army Reserve, Naval Reserve, Marine Corps Reserve, Air National Guard of the United States, the Air Force Reserve and the Coast Guard Reserve.

"Promotion" and "Promoted"—The meaning of these terms is limited to the promotion of Reserve officers. Many members of the Reserve components have a dual status, i.e., NGUS officers have both a Reserve and a State status. In addition, temporary active duty promotions in the Army and AF are in the Army of the United States or USAF without component.

Grade—Means a permanent grade as a Reserve officer. Except where specifically provided, the bill does not apply to temporary promotions.

Points—The "points" used in the bill are the same "points" as are counted toward Reserve retirement under title III of the Army and AF Vitalization and Retirement Equalization Act of 1948.

Terms—Unless otherwise specifically provided, terms used in this Act have the same meaning as in the Armed Forces Reserve Act of 1952.

Active Status—Means the status of a Reserve officer who is not on an inactive status list or in the Retired Reserve or in the inactive National Guard or inactive Air National Guard.

Discharged—Means discharged from an appointment as a Reserve officer.

"Federal recognition" and "federally recognized"—Refer to Federal recognition of officers of the NG and ANG of a State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, under the provisions of Sec. 75 of the National Defense Act.

Title II—The Reserve Components Generally
Sec. 201—Constructive Credit for Promotion Purposes

The appropriate Secretary is authorized to grant constructive credit for promotion purposes to persons initially appointed as Reserve officers, based upon their past experience, education and other qualifications. It is mandatory that persons initially appointed as medical, dental, veterinary, JAG or chaplain officers be granted minimum constructive credit of 4, 3, 2, 3, and 3 years, respectively. Persons holding a Ph.D. or comparable degree in a science allied to medicine may, as determined by the appropriate Secretary, receive constructive credit of three years if appointed as a medical service officer. In a similar manner and on a discretionary basis, persons having the desired qualifications in other fields may be given constructive credit.

Persons appointed in the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard will be placed on a lineal list and assigned running mates according to the amount of constructive credit granted. Persons appointed in the Army and AF will be appointed in the various grades according to the amount of constructive credit.

The authority provided in this section is similar to that for the initial appointment of Regular officers provided in the Officer Personnel Act of 1947.

Sec. 202—Eligibility For Promotion

(a) Eligibility for consideration—Reserve officers are required to be in an active status to be eligible for consideration for promotion and to be eligible for promotion.

(b) Minimum number of points required for each year—Each Reserve officer is required to earn a minimum number of points each year to retain an active status. The minimum number of points to be attained shall not exceed 50, and will be prescribed by the appropriate Secretary, subject to the approval of the Secretary of Defense. In addition to earning the prescribed minimum number of points, the officer must conform to such other qualifications and standards as are prescribed by the appropriate Secretary.

Reserve officers who fail to attain the minimum number of points or fail to meet other qualifications will be transferred to the inactive status list or the Retired Reserve, if qualified, or discharged, except that a Reserve officer who has an obligated period of service will be retained in an active status as provided in section 204.

This section has no counterpart in the Regular promotion systems since Regular officers are always on active duty. This provision is necessary in order to assure that only those officers who participate will be eligible for promotion.

Sec. 203—Selection Boards

(a) General authority for appointment of Boards—General authority is provided for the appropriate Secretary, or such officer as he may designate, to appoint boards convened under this bill. The limitation to boards appointed under this act thereby excludes other boards, such as Federal recognition boards convened under section 75 of the National Defense Act.

(b) Composition of Boards—At least half of the members of selection boards are required to be Reserve officers, to the extent practicable. The qualifying phrase is necessary since all members of selection boards must be senior to any officer being considered by the board.

(c) Service limitations—The same rules governing service on selection boards is established as those provided for Regular boards by the Officer Personnel Act.

(d) Membership and duties of boards—Provides for the membership and duties of selection boards in a manner similar to that provided for Regular selection boards by the Officer Personnel Act. Boards must have at least five members, and at least a majority of the members must concur in each recommendation.

(e) Right to forward communications—Authorizes Reserve officers to forward communications to selection boards in a manner similar to that provided for Regular officers by the OPA.

Sec. 204—Retention as additional numbers

Reserve officers with obligated periods of service in the Reserve components may not avoid their obligation by mere nonfeasance. If any Reserve officer has not completed his period of required service he shall, nevertheless, less, be retained in grade for the remainder of his required service and be an additional number in that grade.

Sec. 205—Retention for retirement

(a) Officers who would otherwise be eliminated from active status at a time when they have between 18 and 19 years of service, are provided three additional years to qualify for retirement.

(b) Officers who would otherwise be eliminated from active status at a time when they have 19 or more years of service are provided two additional years to qualify for retirement.

The provisions of both (a) and (b) are inapplicable to officers removed from an active status for cause, physical disability, or maximum age.

Sec. 206—Advancement Upon Retirement

(a) Promotion of recommended officers found physically incapacitated—Reserve officers who are recommended for promotion, but who are transferred to the Retired Reserve for physical disability prior to being promoted, shall be transferred in the grade for which recommended, if not otherwise entitled to a higher grade. No increase in pay or benefits accrues unless entitled thereto by other provision of law.

(b) Grade in which transfer to Retired Reserve is effective—Transfers to the Retired Reserve are authorized in the highest grade satisfactorily held. No increase in pay or benefits accrues unless entitled thereto under other provision of law.

(c) Advancement of recalled officer when returned to Retired Reserve—Advancement in the Retired Reserve is authorized for retired Reserve officers promoted while serving on active duty. In order not to affect retirement pay under other laws, such advancements in grade shall not result in any increase.

Sec. 207—Grade for officers ordered to active duty

No Reserve officer will be ordered to active duty in a grade lower than his permanent Reserve grade. In the discretion of the appropriate Secretary officers may, however, be ordered to active duty in any higher temporary grade.

Sec. 208—Return to an active status

Uniform treatment is provided for Reserve officers who are recommended for promotion or found qualified for Federal recognition in the next higher grade, but who, before being promoted, are removed from an active status because of failure to participate or otherwise. If such an officer returns to an active status he will again have to be recommended by a selection board or be found qualified for Federal recognition to be returned to a recommended list.

Sec. 209—Suspension during war

Suspension of all or any part of ROPA is authorized in time of war or national emergency declared by the Congress. In the case of suspension of promotion laws, the Secretary of Defense is required (before putting ROPA back into effect) to recommend necessary legislation for the readjustment of the grades of Reserve officers.

Sec. 210—Sea or foreign service

There shall be no requirement for sea or foreign service for the promotion of Reserve officers under this Act.

Sec. 211—Grades of Reserve officers

Provides a guarantee that the permanent grades authorized for Reserve officers will be the same as those provided by law for Regular officers. It is intended that Navy commodores will be advanced to the grade of rear admiral, since the grade of commodore is no longer a permanent grade in the Navy. Nothing limits the opportunity of Reserve officers to hold temporary grades in their service, as in the case of grades above major general or rear admiral.

Sec. 212—Retention of officers assigned to Selective Service

Reserve officers, while assigned to the Selective Service System, may be retained in an active status until they reach age 60.

200,000 ACTIVE RESERVISTS ON DUTY

More than 200,000 Reserve officers are on active duty with the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps, according to latest statistics available at the Pentagon.

Of this number, the Air Force has the major share—102,177; the Army next with 85,092; followed by the Navy with 34,122 and the Marine Corps with 7,051.

Here is the way the active-duty Reservists look broken down by rank in each Service:

|                      | Army   | Navy   | Air Force | Marine Corps |
|----------------------|--------|--------|-----------|--------------|
| Gen. & Flag Officers | 8      | 2      | 17        | 0            |

Army Likely To Tab Airborne Division for NATO Rotation

ing significance" in the drive to raise career attractiveness.

The Vice Chief of Staff said the Army hopes "shortly" to adopt division rotation, which he said "should greatly increase our combat potential by assuring the soldier a stability of assignment which will generate high morale and unit efficiency."

At the Pentagon, there was no official comment available in the wake of General Bolté's remarks as to the identity of the first division to be sent overseas in the rotation plan.

However, there are strong reasons to believe it probably will be the celebrated 82d Airborne Division and that it will be sent to Europe.

Here is the reasoning behind this speculation.

THE JOURNAL has reported previously that the Army will launch division rotation by switching a division now in the United States with one presently in Europe.

Secondly, it appears obvious the Army will want to send a "combat-ready" division overseas.

That's the primary reason by process of elimination to suspect the 82d Airborne is headed for duty overseas.

According to no less an authority than General Matthew B. Ridgway, the Army has at the present time only three combat-ready divisions in the United States. These are the 1st Armored at Ft. Hood, Tex., the 44th Infantry at Ft. Lewis, Wash., and the 82d Airborne at Ft. Bragg, N. C.

The 1st Armored, it has been widely reported, will be one of the two Army divisions (the other will be the 47th Infantry Division at Ft. Benning, Ga.) which will be put through specialized "atomic age" training and tests in late 1954 and through the Spring of 1955.

So that rules out the 1st Armored as a likely candidate for overseas duty.

That the Army would send the 44th Infantry Division, which has a National Guard designation and whose colors are slated for return to State control in the current fiscal year (Illinois), all the way from Ft. Lewis to Europe is not seen likely.

The 44th, with its new designation, ultimately could well be the first division to be rotated to the Pacific.

Therefore, of the Army's three combat-ready divisions identified by General Ridgway, the odds favor by far the 82d Airborne for assignment to Europe. These odds are strengthened by the fact that the 82d is overdue for foreign service.

Assignment of the 82d Airborne to Europe additionally would have a significant effect on overall NATO morale, it is believed by military observers. They say this deployment would give dramatic demonstration of U. S. "staying power" and determination to provide NATO with the very best in weapons and U. S. forces.

Backing this up is the deployment during recent months or announcement of plans to deploy to Europe 280mm. atomic gun battalions, Corporal guided missile units and Air Force Matador pilotless squadrons.

Although the 82d Airborne is considered the top candidate for the NATO duty, the 11th Airborne may get the assignment. One reason for this possibility is the fact that if the 82d goes to Europe, the 11th undoubtedly would be shifted to Bragg to take advantage of that outstanding site for airborne training.

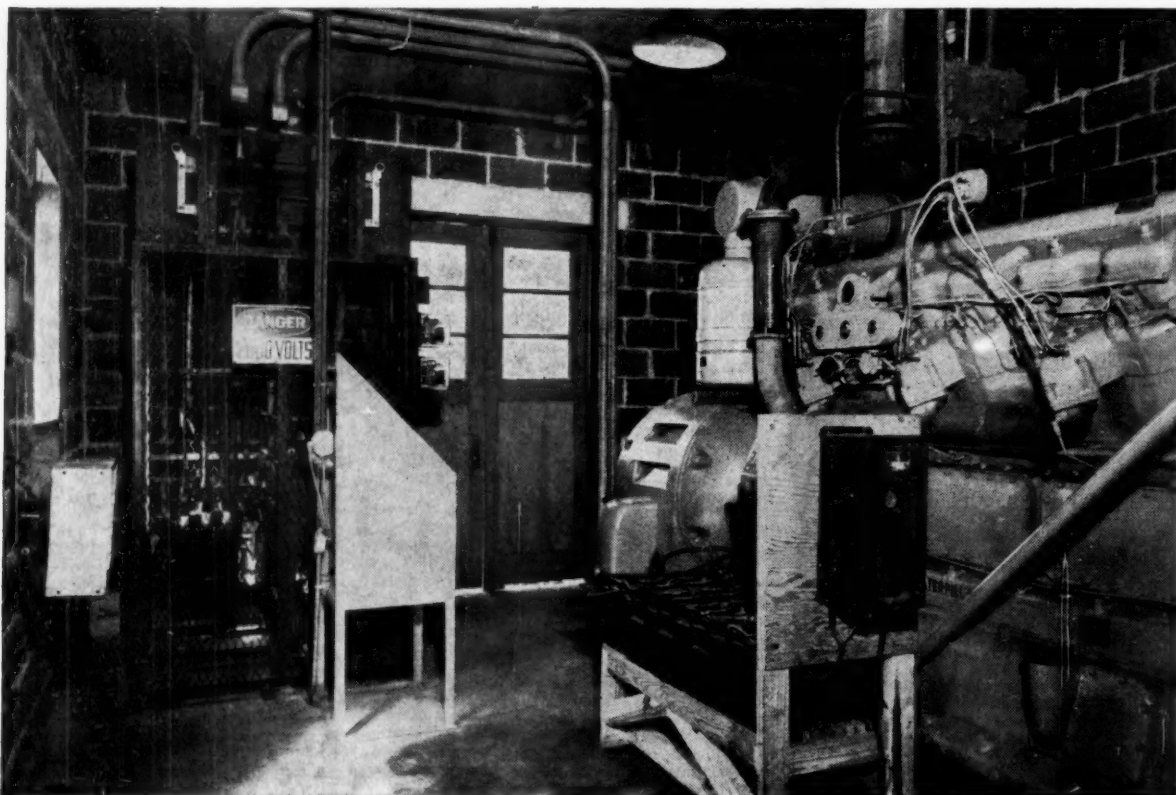

In this case, the division to be rotated from Europe would go to Campbell.

There's a chance therefore that in order to cut down on one division shift the Army may start division rotation with the 11th instead of the 82d.

Although there has been, as stated, no official confirmation as yet regarding the identity of the first divisions to be involved in the new rotation scheme, an announcement can be expected soon, in view of General Bolté's address to the American Legion.

Such an early announcement is essential, since the Army will want to give individuals as much time as possible to make arrangements.

Of the five divisions now in Europe, it would appear that the 1st Infantry Division in Germany will be a strong contender to be the first division to be rotated to the United States in view of its long service abroad.

How the Navy takes a load off its mind

CAT* DIESEL ELECTRIC SET STANDS BY IN CASE OF EMERGENCY

Any failure in commercial power at the Ammunition Depot could seriously cripple the efficiency of this part of the Naval Base at Charleston, S. C. The reason it won't happen is shown here—a Caterpillar D397 Diesel Electric Set installed by the Navy for stand-by power.

Within seconds of any emergency, this compact 315 KW sentinel goes into action, supplying steady power for the Depot's water pumps, battery charging building, shops and almost two dozen living quarters for a detachment of Marines and their families. Water, heat and electricity flow to the area's stoves, furnaces, refrigerators, freezers and air conditioners without interruption.

Caterpillar stand-by Diesel Electric Sets are completely automatic: they can be equipped to start instantly when high line power fails, to stop as soon as it resumes. In critical jobs all over the world, they've proved utterly reliable. One reason: their efficient fuel system which needs no operating adjustments. Another: plastic-impregnated oil filters which screen out particles as tiny as 39-millionths of an inch. A third: a crankshaft that's forged of specially selected steel, its bearing surfaces "Hi-Electro" hardened for years of extra life.

They're easy to set up, too—require no heavy concrete foundation, no complicated switch gear, no trained operator, and no experienced engineer.

And pulling duty for the armed services—where economy is almost as important as dependability—these yellow diesels perform faultlessly on low-cost No. 2 furnace oil.

Self-regulated electric sets are available in sizes up to 117 KW, externally regulated sets up to 315 KW.
